Juried by Anke Loh

CHICAGO—Woman Made Gallery (WMG) is proud to present Connectivity, a group exhibition with work by 39 artists. Juried by Anke Loh, this exhibition explores connecting to oneself, to others, and to one’s surroundings. The exhibition includes visual material, tactile and sound explorations, poetry, moving image, and more, experienced through the prism of how we establish and maintain our connections on multiple levels. The opening reception will be held on Saturday, July 13, from 4 to 7 p.m. at 1332 S. Halsted St., Chicago, IL 60607.

Juror’s Statement: “Societies and cultures have been transformed over the last decade or so through global access to and use of new and emerging technologies, including smart textiles. Our methods for communicating and connecting with one another is accelerating, with many more ways to connect across the planet in real time.

“At the same time, particularly during the height of the pandemic when everything came to a jolting halt, we discovered how to ‘be in touch’ and ‘maintain contact’ in new ways. Isolation-induced longing engendered remarkably innovative ways to communicate.

“In a world with so much urgency, how do people in crisis get in touch, take action, or form a protest? Who is in contact with whom, and what are their methods of communication? What are the unknown forces that move us, and what or with whom do we maintain contact? Do immediacy and speeding up everything help or hurt us? Do we need to slow down to find a deep connection with sensation? What about the importance of touch to foster deeper connection? What will be the next interface for human connectivity?”

“Artists are pivotal social catalysts who filter, express, and help reveal new pathways for verbal and nonverbal communication. This exhibition aims to showcase artistic explorations into connectivity via the realms of fashion, design, craft, artificial intelligence, and social consciousness. Work in this exhibition reflects both social justice and imagination.”

About the Juror: Anke Loh is a designer, artist, and educator who works at the intersection of fashion, art, and technology. With a focus on textile development and wearable tech, her collaborative practice explores the potential ways of building community through craft and making. In the process of creating installations and site-specific interventions, Loh often invites scientists, designers, artists, and community members to collaborate on innovative projects such as touch-sensitive embroidered textiles that trigger prerecorded soundscapes. Her practice also explores the inherent meaning and symbolism imbedded into everyday materials such as wire, which has been used to build fences as well as to serve as a conduit for communication across borders.
